

How to Avoid the Social Media Daily Controversy.

We'll be covering the most popular ones in most Facebook groups involved in creating habitats for pollinators as well as home rearing monarch butterflies.

There's seems to be a lot of experts gardeners, biologists, conservationist, etc... online that through articles, presentations, comments and replies through various groups all claim to have the perfect solution when it comes to the only right flowers to be planted in our gardens. Then there are those who constantly express their disapproval toward raising monarch butterflies and will do and say anything to discourage the hundreds of thousands of people who've already been involved in this activity for some time.

If you're caught in these types of controversy in our group or elsewhere on Facebook would like to avoid them all together and make your life less stressful, please consider reading my own two cents approach to this never ending social media controversy. :-)

<http://savethemonarchbutterfly.ca/social-media-controversy.pdf>

This is my own green worm (swallowtail caterpillar) story that started all.
(Please don't laugh too hard.) :-)

<http://savethemonarchbutterfly.ca/leo-early-beginning.pdf>

Due to the constantly Facebook platform changes, some of the most important description of our group rules do not show up in our home page, here is a copy of the "About" page that used to always be at the top right of our group home page:

<http://savethemonarchbutterfly.ca/group-about.pdf>

For any question you may have please feel free to contact me anytime.

Leo Silvestri

1158 Erie St E Windsor ON Canada N9A3Z3

Cell: 519-977-3639 Email